

Acknowledgements

For their support in the production of Social Fabrics and the creation of this issue of Intelligent Agent, we would like to thank:

Leonardo Education Forum Directors Nina Czegledy, Victoria Vesna, Andrea Polli, and, especially Ed Shanken, who has worked closely with us on this project; also staff members Kathleen Quillian, Communications Associate; and Pamela Grant-Ryan, Managing Editor, Leonardo; and Roger Malina, Executive Director, Leonardo, who has also been invaluable in the process.

At the University of Texas, Dallas: Tom Linehan, Director of the Center for Interactive Arts and Engineering and Rebecca Gozzola, Assistant, also student volunteers from University of Texas Dallas.

At LSU: David Cronrath, Dean of the College of Art + Design; Stuart Baron, Director of the School of Art; Stephen Beck, Director, Laboratory for Creative Arts and Technologies, LSU Center for Computation & Technology; Rod Parker, Associate Professor of Graphic Design; Phillip Winfield, Graduate Student in Graphic Design. And especially Jeane Cooper, our project manager.

At Columbia College Chicago: Annette Barbier, Chair of the Interactive Arts and Media Department and the department as a whole for their support of this project. Sabina Ott, former chair of the Art & Design program for asking Patrick to moderate the Sartorial Flux panel at Columbia College Chicago in 2006, which was a precursor to this project.

And last but not least, the College Art Association for their help in coordinating Social Fabrics.

Patrick Lichty, Editor-In Chief, Intelligent Agent,
Susan E. Ryan, Guest Editor for Social Fabrics